

JACK: Um, hi. I'm Jack. Are you okay?

JILL: Your Majesty.

JACK: What?

JILL: Are you okay, Your Majesty? Or Your Highness. I'm a princess, or at least I was until an evil witch cursed me and cast me out into the wilderness. She even took my tiara! Oh, forget it. Just call me Jill.

JACK: Oh. That's too bad, Jill. You might not want to stay in this village, though. We're being terrorized by an ogre.

JILL: Can't be any worse than an evil witch.

JACK: Well, the wizard says he can defeat the ogre with a magic spell, but first I have to gather all of the villagers together so that the spell will be more powerful.

JILL: Do you think his ogre spell works well against witches, too?

JACK: It might, but I'm afraid I won't be able to convince the villagers to go with me. I'm not very good at being assertive.

JILL: I can help you with that! Princesses are very assertive. Watch. (Takes an assertive stance.) I am the princess, and I command you to do as I say!

JACK: Wow!

STUDENT 1: Um...you can't eat here.

STUDENT 2: What? I always sit with you.

STUDENT 3: Not anymore.

STUDENT 1: Here's the thing. We've decided to start a club, and you're not in it. We have top secret club meetings at lunch, so you can't sit near us.

STUDENT 2: That's not fair! Why can't I be in your club?

STUDENT 3: She thinks we shouldn't have more than three members, or it will be too hard to keep all the club secrets.

STUDENT 2: I can keep a secret.

STUDENT 1: Sorry, I'm the club president, and I already decided.

STUDENT 2: But these two are my friends. They can't keep secrets from me!

STUDENT 1: They have to if they want to be in my club. So...bye!
